

Mail order

Finally, an easy way to tackle the mound of bills, catalogs, fliers, you name it accumulating in your home. Empty your mailbox into the Mail.sorter: Its cheeky pre-labeled slots—"notice me," "respond to me," "read me," and "pay me"—and a side compartment for storing magazines or stamps make organizing a cinch. Your next project: deciding what to do with all your extra counter space!

$16, spoonsisters.com.

Fizz on tap

This nifty machine lets you mix your own sodas at home and helps reduce the number of bottles and cans tossed in landfills. To turn tap water into sparkling water in seconds, fill SodaStream's reusable bottle with water, attach it to the machine, press a button, and watch the CO₂ go to work. Enjoy some seltzer or add one of 25 syrups for flavored fizz. Best of all, the bottles (two come with each machine) have special airtight caps, which keep the soda bubbly longer than standard bottles.

Seltzer kit, $79, soda kit, $95; sodastream.com.

On the Home Front

A few new things to make your house a little homier.

A simple secret

Häagen-Dazs is dishing out a new line of ice cream called Five that proves you don't need a long list of fancy extras to create the perfect scoop. Nope, all it takes is five simple ingredients: milk, cream, sugar, eggs, and natural flavor. Choose brown sugar, coffee, ginger, milk chocolate, mint, passion fruit, or vanilla bean. No matter which scoop you crave, you can be sure that each flavor has a delicious, pure, made-from-scratch taste.

$4.39; supermarkets nationwide.

